

From: Jeffery Edwards <jeevacation@gmail.com>
To: PETER MANDELSON <[REDACTED]>
Subject: <no subject>
Date: Tue, 07 Oct 2008 16:47:17 +0000

You should start to mention , that this crisis , may be the birthing pains of a new more fair and equitable system of finance. Unlike the depression. There is plenty of resources to go around. The car lots are full, not empty, the food stalls are full not empty, the houses are there, it is the store of value, that we call money, that is artificially in short supply.. Artificially.. That's the solution. A new system that uses the internet to distribute value . --more to come. What I am calling E-life , , new form of ECONOMIC LIFE> IT has resources, it has feedback loops, that control the pressure, boards that control the amount of flow, but it does not yet have a brain. The pieces have historically operated separately, now that they are all connected, you can't fix one aspect, without causing a consequence in another part of the system.. Keep the medical analogy.' First Triage, keep the patient alive.. Decide what its vital signs , should be, and then measure them with respect to the new ideal, Example, in the past if my business was laying off 50 people, it would be considered a bad sign.. Now with the computer able to replace those fifty and add another two hundred, the numbers don't reflect adequately or accurately, what is going on.